

Have you ever wondered why our assessments and policies
keep failing to produce healthy, sustainable development?

We can create healthy urban environments, but it requires that we work together in innovative new ways, particularly in these times of austerity. We must maximise involvement, but we must also do it efficiently. Workable solutions can only be found when there's a complete understanding of the many pressures involved.

db+a has over the last 15 years established long-lasting relationships with pioneering universities, developers, local authorities, communities and leading independent experts, all dedicated to maximising quality for all over the long-term.

Our small team of independent knowledge leaders and facilitators are uniquely positioned to integrate sustainability and health into viable development delivery using tailored methods of appraisal, engagement and strategic planning.

